Joe Biden was once seen by those on both sides of the political fence as a man of decency and integrity, burdened by the terrible loss of his wife and daughter in a car accident. But since 1988, when his first presidential run imploded after he was caught plagiarizing speeches from Robert Kennedy, Hubert Humphrey, and Neil Kinnock, people began to see BloJoe for what he really is: a man of no decency and less integrity who isn't above exploiting personal tragedy for political gain, an impression confirmed at the 2008 Vice Presidential debate, where - once again - he falsely accused the now-deceased man who struck the car driven by Mrs. Biden as she drove into an intersection against a red light of "drinking his lunch".

Well, he's at it again, folks: another terrible loss, another opportunity for political gain.

Since Beau Biden died of cancer on May 30th, the Veep's team has floated the idea that it was Beau's dying wish for The Great White Dope to make yet another presidential run. His Dopeness stoked the fire by appearing on "The Late Show with Stephen Colbert". After 20 minutes of playing My-Loss-Is-WAY-Worse-Than-Your-Loss, Colbert (who lost his father and two brothers in a plane crash) swooned to BloJoe: "I think your experience and your example of suffering and service is something that would be sorely missed... we'd all be very happy if you did run." PUKE!

Am I the only human on the entire planet who found this obscene? Guess so...

* A.V. Club: "... heart-wrenchingly honest... shockingly forthright for a politician... his tearful, God fearing earnestness... his flaws and insecurities. More than anything, he's authentic."

* Bloomberg: "Nobody could doubt either the honesty or the grief."

* CNN: "... slapped the nation awake, reminding us that we've become almost numb as we listen to the excuses, the prevarications, the bragging, the naked vanity that seems to dominate both major parties... [he is] ... a man of the people...".

* New York Post: "... about finding the faith and courage to continue living in the wake of tremendous loss... [he] gave viewers... that essential sense of humanity that makes people believe in a candidate."

* New York Times: "... beautiful and genuine and revealed the golden heart that everybody knows is at the core of the man... [his] is a story of dual loss... Out of that loss comes a great empathy, a connection to those who are suffering in... this world... a hyper-charged sense of mission... a liberation from the fear of failure that dogs most politicians, and causes them to dodge, prevaricate and spin."

Biden makes used car salesmen seem authentic. He agreed to play Ed McMahon to Barack Obama's Johnny Carson after he made some vicious remarks about Obama, AND after he vowed not to be anybody's laughing boy. And his "golden heart" is pure lead. Has everyone forgotten BloJoe's antics at the Robert Bork confirmation hearings (topped only by the antics of the vile Ted Kennedy)? And his antics at the Clarence Thomas confirmation hearings (topped only by the antics of the vile Orrin Hatch)? And his voting against an anti-flag desecration amendment? And his "My Bad" over his Tough on Crime pose? And his boast that he predicted 9/11? And his wanting to send Iran $200 million AFTER 9/11? And his friendships with racists Strom Thurmond and Robert Byrd? And his stumping for Obama's illegal, immoral agenda? And his being against "marriage equality" before he was for it? And his shakedown of Ukraine's president (with the Boss's blessings)? And his habit of shoving his foot into his fool mouth? And his habit of pawing women and underage girls? And the FIVE college deferments he used to stay out of serving in Vietnam? And how his father wrangled a medical exemption for Junior after the deferments ran out? And his and his family's decades of corruption and grift? Did I mention how his first presidential run imploded after he was caught plagiarizing speeches from Robert Kennedy, Hubert Humphrey, and British politician Neil Kinnock?

Cokie Roberts shocked her fellow über-libbies on ABC's "This Week" when she said: "I've looked at every poll taken since [Colbert], and the highest [Biden] gets is about 22%... you tend to be higher before you even get in the race. And so I think it would be a mistake for him [to run]." Perhaps Cokie should ask Josh Alcorn, finance director and senior adviser to - you guessed it! - Beau Biden. After joining BloJoe's Super PAC, Alcorn announced into a cell phone while on an Amtrak (Biden has made a second career out of commuting between his Delaware home and Washington on Amtrak) loud enough for everyone around him to hear: "I am 100% that Joe is in."

So Democrats have a "choice": a 3rd Obama term, a 3rd Clinton term, former Martin O'Malley, Lincoln Chafee, former Jim Webb, Bernie Sanders, or Lawrence Lessig, who's such a nobody, the Democratic National Committee didn't invite him to its Presidential debate. A true Confederacy of Dunces!

UPDATE: Biden told Charlamagne Tha God: "If you have a problem figuring out whether you're for me or [Donald] Trump, then you ain't black". He gave a half hearted apology the next day, saying he "shouldn't have been such a wise guy", yet insinuated Charlamagne goaded him into it, then made the outrageous claim that Trump has "spent his entire career denigrating African-Americans". [May 22, 2020]

UPDATE: Instead of ranting about how Democrat henchman Mark Elias got key states to circumvent their respective legislatures' election laws "to save democracy"¹; how tabulations in 5 states was halted (which has NEVER happened before); that hundreds of thousands of ballots were dumped and/or switched in Biden's favor^{2 3 4 5 6 7}; that Dominion Voting System's technical representative in Fulton County, Georgia, was Kamala Harris's campaign photographer (!)⁸; that Trump haters Brian Kemp and Brad Raffensperger formed an unholy alliance with Stacey Abrams without notifying the Georgia Assembly⁹ and ballot rejection rates dropped like a rock as a result¹⁰; that Democrats questioned the integrity of Dominion's machines¹¹; that Nancy Pelosi, Muriel Bowser, and Mitch McConnell staged an "insurrection" at the Capitol to scare the shit out of lawmakers into certifying this fraud of an "election"; that the federal investigation into Biden's son DISQUALIFIED BlJoe from assuming the presidency, I will just say there is NO fucking way in Hell this asshole straight-up legit received more votes than any presidential candidate in American history!
